My dear Friend:

For your gift of the large framed pane of blue glass, with the pleasant note accompanying it, accept my warmest thanks, though I feel somewhat reluctant to have had you put to the trouble and expense of procuring it. But this is only one of many kindnesses received at your hands, and is so characteristic of your friendly regard, which never fails to be "true blue". I will see what effect the sun may produce, by a remedial nature, through this medium, by a fair trial, and in due time make report thereof. A "painful" operation to remove pain accords with the homœopathic

Principle - Similia Similibus curantur"; though in this instance, Etymologically, it may prove only "Lucus a non lucendo."

I am sure of one thing, that if, at any time, I shall have a fit of the blues, it will only be necessary to sit in close proximity to your translucent gift - to be put in a sunshiny condition.

With kind regards to Mrs. Nichols, I remain,

Your indebted friend,

Wm. Lloyd Garrison.

Miss Caroline C. Thayer.
